A neighbor of the daycare home testified he heard a gunshot in the area. Gray's car was found four days after she vanished and some of her blood, including shell casings, was found inside the car. Evidence at the scene was consistent with her being shot in the head, slumping forward and being pushed aside so someone could drive. Pann was observed by family members that night who explained he had been digging all day. On 14 September 2007, his appeal was dismissed by the Court of Appeals. | Parker, Sam | Theresa Parker, wife | Aug., 2009 | Walker County, GA | The defendant, a sergeant with the LaFayette Police Dept., was convicted of the first-degree murder of his wife and sentenced to life in prison. Although local police, the Georgia Bureau of Investigation, and the FBI performed exhaustive searches, the only forensic evidence they discovered was trace amounts of the victim's blood on the rear bumper of her car. Prosecutors relied on circumstantial evidence and evidence of "patterns of conduct" to sustain the conviction. Floyd County DA Leigh Patterson prosecuted the case for the State. Body found in September 2010 by farmer, 12 miles from defendant's house. |
